1. The railway line between Stalin (Brasov) and Campina has not been electrified nor are there any signs of preparation for electrification. At several points along the railroad line high tension wires cross or run along the line which may have given the impression that it was being electrified.
2. Traveling on the railroad line between Buzau and Braila at night, it was single track as the train had to wait at intervals for trains to pass which were traveling in the opposite direction.
3. Marshalling yard warehouses were under construction at Floesti.
4. In traveling across Rumania, no indications were seen that any railroad lines were being converted to Soviet gauge.
